Panel 1: A Fallen Sparkle

Scene: Foxy the little orange fox discovers a tiny, bright glowing celestial star nestled in a patch of forest moss, poking it curiously with one paw.

TITLE: STAR-STRUCK IN THE BRAMBLEWOOD

PANEL 1: A Fallen Sparkle

SCENE:
Deep twilight in the Bramblewood. Cool blue shadows wrap around ancient, gnarly roots. In a velvety patch of emerald moss, a tiny celestial star?chubby-pointed, golden, and gently pulsating with warm light?sits blinking sleepily. Foxy, a spry little orange fox with oversized ears and a fluffy white-tipped tail, crouches low, curiosity radiating off him. He tentatively pokes the little star with a single paw pad.

CAPTION (NARRATION):
Deep in the Bramblewood, wishes usually stay up where they belong. Usually.

SFX:
boop!
shhhwiiiing... (soft harmonic hum)

FOXY:

?Whoa. Either someone lost a nightlight, or the sky is leaking again.?

THE STAR:
Tinkle-blink!

PANEL 2: Enter the Expert

SCENE:
A chaotic flurry of feathers! A plump, round owl with thick, crooked wire-rimmed spectacles crash-lands through the canopy, catching his talons on a low branch and ending up dangling completely upside down. Without missing a beat, he unrolls an impossibly long, convoluted blueprint covered in scribbled formulas, springs, and gears, thrusting it right into Foxy?s bewildered face.

SFX:
CRASH! FLAP-FLAP-FLAP! THWACK!

BARNABY THE OWL:
?Halt, vulpine citizen! Do not tamper with cosmic debris! Step aside for Barnaby Q. Hootenanny?Doctor of Astro-Mechanical Physics!?

FOXY:
?Uh? nice to meet you, upside-down bird. Should your face be that red??

BARNABY THE OWL:
?Irrelevant! Behold: Operation Sky-Heft 3000! Twelve stages of pure ballistic brilliance! We?ll have this little spark home by tea time!?

PANEL 3: The Slingshot Disaster

SCENE:
Barnaby has rigged a thick, rubbery jungle vine between two sturdy birch trees like a giant slingshot. He?s planted his feet on the ground, leaning all his round weight backward to stretch the vine to its breaking point. The tiny star sits safely on a mushroom cap nearby, totally untouched, while Barnaby?s talons slip on the slick mud.

BARNABY THE OWL:
?Maximum tension achieved! Calculating trajectory... wind resistance... and?WAIT, MY TALONS?!?

SFX:
RRRRRR-STRETCH...
TWAAAAAANG!!

FOXY:
(wincing, covering his ears)
?Barnaby, wait, you didn't even put the star in the?!?

SFX:
FWHUMP-ZOOM!

BARNABY THE OWL:
(streaking backward through the brush)
??HOOOOOOO-BOY-NOT-AGAAAAAIN!?

PANEL 4: The Seesaw Catapult

SCENE:
Barnaby is bruised and covered in twigs, but undeterred. He has placed a thick log across a river stone to make a crude seesaw. The glowing star rests on one end. Barnaby is frozen mid-air, having belly-flopped off a massive boulder toward the opposite end.

Hilariously, just before Barnaby lands, the star simply rolls off the wood onto a soft patch of clover. The empty seesaw flings Barnaby wildly off-course, jamming him head-first into a hollow knot of a rotting oak tree. His tail feathers and round rear twitch comically in the air.

SFX:
PLONK! (star rolling off)
WHAM! (seesaw impact)
THUUUUUUMP! (Barnaby lodging in the trunk)

BARNABY THE OWL:
(muffled from inside the tree trunk)
?A minor miscalculation of kinetic transfer! Fetch my protractor, fox!?

FOXY:
(deadpan, glancing down at the completely unharmed star)
?Right. The protractor was definitely the problem.?

PANEL 5: Float Away Home

SCENE:
A breathtaking wide shot. The tiny star awakens, glowing ten times brighter with brilliant rings of golden and turquoise light. It levitates effortlessly into the cool night air, leaving a shimmering ribbon of stardust behind it as it ascends toward the constellation-strewn sky.

Below, Foxy stands on his hind legs, grinning wide and waving a paw in farewell. Next to him, Barnaby sits covered in moss and dandelion fluff, his crooked glasses slipping down his beak, eyes spiraling in stunned, quiet disbelief.

CAPTION (NARRATION):
Turns out, some things don?t need catapults or complex trigonometry. They just need a little room to shine.

THE STAR:
CHIME-GLOWWWWWW!

FOXY:
?Safe travels, little guy! Say hi to the moon for me!?

BARNABY THE OWL:
(dazed, beak dropped open)
?...Gravity is a liar and my degree is entirely useless.?

Panel 2: Enter the Expert

Scene: A clumsy, plump owl wearing crooked spectacles awkwardly crash-lands onto a low branch upside-down, confidently presenting an absurdly complex blueprint to launch the star back up.

TITLE: STAR-STRUCK IN THE BRAMBLEWOOD

PANEL 1: A Fallen Sparkle

SCENE:
Deep twilight in the Bramblewood. Cool blue shadows wrap around ancient, gnarly roots. In a velvety patch of emerald moss, a tiny celestial star?chubby-pointed, golden, and gently pulsating with warm light?sits blinking sleepily. Foxy, a spry little orange fox with oversized ears and a fluffy white-tipped tail, crouches low, curiosity radiating off him. He tentatively pokes the little star with a single paw pad.

CAPTION (NARRATION):
Deep in the Bramblewood, wishes usually stay up where they belong. Usually.

SFX:
boop!
shhhwiiiing... (soft harmonic hum)

FOXY:

?Whoa. Either someone lost a nightlight, or the sky is leaking again.?

THE STAR:
Tinkle-blink!

PANEL 2: Enter the Expert

SCENE:
A chaotic flurry of feathers! A plump, round owl with thick, crooked wire-rimmed spectacles crash-lands through the canopy, catching his talons on a low branch and ending up dangling completely upside down. Without missing a beat, he unrolls an impossibly long, convoluted blueprint covered in scribbled formulas, springs, and gears, thrusting it right into Foxy?s bewildered face.

SFX:
CRASH! FLAP-FLAP-FLAP! THWACK!

BARNABY THE OWL:
?Halt, vulpine citizen! Do not tamper with cosmic debris! Step aside for Barnaby Q. Hootenanny?Doctor of Astro-Mechanical Physics!?

FOXY:
?Uh? nice to meet you, upside-down bird. Should your face be that red??

BARNABY THE OWL:
?Irrelevant! Behold: Operation Sky-Heft 3000! Twelve stages of pure ballistic brilliance! We?ll have this little spark home by tea time!?

PANEL 3: The Slingshot Disaster

SCENE:
Barnaby has rigged a thick, rubbery jungle vine between two sturdy birch trees like a giant slingshot. He?s planted his feet on the ground, leaning all his round weight backward to stretch the vine to its breaking point. The tiny star sits safely on a mushroom cap nearby, totally untouched, while Barnaby?s talons slip on the slick mud.

BARNABY THE OWL:
?Maximum tension achieved! Calculating trajectory... wind resistance... and?WAIT, MY TALONS?!?

SFX:
RRRRRR-STRETCH...
TWAAAAAANG!!

FOXY:
(wincing, covering his ears)
?Barnaby, wait, you didn't even put the star in the?!?

SFX:
FWHUMP-ZOOM!

BARNABY THE OWL:
(streaking backward through the brush)
??HOOOOOOO-BOY-NOT-AGAAAAAIN!?

PANEL 4: The Seesaw Catapult

SCENE:
Barnaby is bruised and covered in twigs, but undeterred. He has placed a thick log across a river stone to make a crude seesaw. The glowing star rests on one end. Barnaby is frozen mid-air, having belly-flopped off a massive boulder toward the opposite end.

Hilariously, just before Barnaby lands, the star simply rolls off the wood onto a soft patch of clover. The empty seesaw flings Barnaby wildly off-course, jamming him head-first into a hollow knot of a rotting oak tree. His tail feathers and round rear twitch comically in the air.

SFX:
PLONK! (star rolling off)
WHAM! (seesaw impact)
THUUUUUUMP! (Barnaby lodging in the trunk)

BARNABY THE OWL:
(muffled from inside the tree trunk)
?A minor miscalculation of kinetic transfer! Fetch my protractor, fox!?

FOXY:
(deadpan, glancing down at the completely unharmed star)
?Right. The protractor was definitely the problem.?

PANEL 5: Float Away Home

SCENE:
A breathtaking wide shot. The tiny star awakens, glowing ten times brighter with brilliant rings of golden and turquoise light. It levitates effortlessly into the cool night air, leaving a shimmering ribbon of stardust behind it as it ascends toward the constellation-strewn sky.

Below, Foxy stands on his hind legs, grinning wide and waving a paw in farewell. Next to him, Barnaby sits covered in moss and dandelion fluff, his crooked glasses slipping down his beak, eyes spiraling in stunned, quiet disbelief.

CAPTION (NARRATION):
Turns out, some things don?t need catapults or complex trigonometry. They just need a little room to shine.

THE STAR:
CHIME-GLOWWWWWW!

FOXY:
?Safe travels, little guy! Say hi to the moon for me!?

BARNABY THE OWL:
(dazed, beak dropped open)
?...Gravity is a liar and my degree is entirely useless.?

Panel 3: The Slingshot Disaster

Scene: The owl attempts to use a stretchy jungle vine between two trees as a slingshot to fire the star, but accidentally launches himself backwards instead.

TITLE: STAR-STRUCK IN THE BRAMBLEWOOD

PANEL 1: A Fallen Sparkle

SCENE:
Deep twilight in the Bramblewood. Cool blue shadows wrap around ancient, gnarly roots. In a velvety patch of emerald moss, a tiny celestial star?chubby-pointed, golden, and gently pulsating with warm light?sits blinking sleepily. Foxy, a spry little orange fox with oversized ears and a fluffy white-tipped tail, crouches low, curiosity radiating off him. He tentatively pokes the little star with a single paw pad.

CAPTION (NARRATION):
Deep in the Bramblewood, wishes usually stay up where they belong. Usually.

SFX:
boop!
shhhwiiiing... (soft harmonic hum)

FOXY:

?Whoa. Either someone lost a nightlight, or the sky is leaking again.?

THE STAR:
Tinkle-blink!

PANEL 2: Enter the Expert

SCENE:
A chaotic flurry of feathers! A plump, round owl with thick, crooked wire-rimmed spectacles crash-lands through the canopy, catching his talons on a low branch and ending up dangling completely upside down. Without missing a beat, he unrolls an impossibly long, convoluted blueprint covered in scribbled formulas, springs, and gears, thrusting it right into Foxy?s bewildered face.

SFX:
CRASH! FLAP-FLAP-FLAP! THWACK!

BARNABY THE OWL:
?Halt, vulpine citizen! Do not tamper with cosmic debris! Step aside for Barnaby Q. Hootenanny?Doctor of Astro-Mechanical Physics!?

FOXY:
?Uh? nice to meet you, upside-down bird. Should your face be that red??

BARNABY THE OWL:
?Irrelevant! Behold: Operation Sky-Heft 3000! Twelve stages of pure ballistic brilliance! We?ll have this little spark home by tea time!?

PANEL 3: The Slingshot Disaster

SCENE:
Barnaby has rigged a thick, rubbery jungle vine between two sturdy birch trees like a giant slingshot. He?s planted his feet on the ground, leaning all his round weight backward to stretch the vine to its breaking point. The tiny star sits safely on a mushroom cap nearby, totally untouched, while Barnaby?s talons slip on the slick mud.

BARNABY THE OWL:
?Maximum tension achieved! Calculating trajectory... wind resistance... and?WAIT, MY TALONS?!?

SFX:
RRRRRR-STRETCH...
TWAAAAAANG!!

FOXY:
(wincing, covering his ears)
?Barnaby, wait, you didn't even put the star in the?!?

SFX:
FWHUMP-ZOOM!

BARNABY THE OWL:
(streaking backward through the brush)
??HOOOOOOO-BOY-NOT-AGAAAAAIN!?

PANEL 4: The Seesaw Catapult

SCENE:
Barnaby is bruised and covered in twigs, but undeterred. He has placed a thick log across a river stone to make a crude seesaw. The glowing star rests on one end. Barnaby is frozen mid-air, having belly-flopped off a massive boulder toward the opposite end.

Hilariously, just before Barnaby lands, the star simply rolls off the wood onto a soft patch of clover. The empty seesaw flings Barnaby wildly off-course, jamming him head-first into a hollow knot of a rotting oak tree. His tail feathers and round rear twitch comically in the air.

SFX:
PLONK! (star rolling off)
WHAM! (seesaw impact)
THUUUUUUMP! (Barnaby lodging in the trunk)

BARNABY THE OWL:
(muffled from inside the tree trunk)
?A minor miscalculation of kinetic transfer! Fetch my protractor, fox!?

FOXY:
(deadpan, glancing down at the completely unharmed star)
?Right. The protractor was definitely the problem.?

PANEL 5: Float Away Home

SCENE:
A breathtaking wide shot. The tiny star awakens, glowing ten times brighter with brilliant rings of golden and turquoise light. It levitates effortlessly into the cool night air, leaving a shimmering ribbon of stardust behind it as it ascends toward the constellation-strewn sky.

Below, Foxy stands on his hind legs, grinning wide and waving a paw in farewell. Next to him, Barnaby sits covered in moss and dandelion fluff, his crooked glasses slipping down his beak, eyes spiraling in stunned, quiet disbelief.

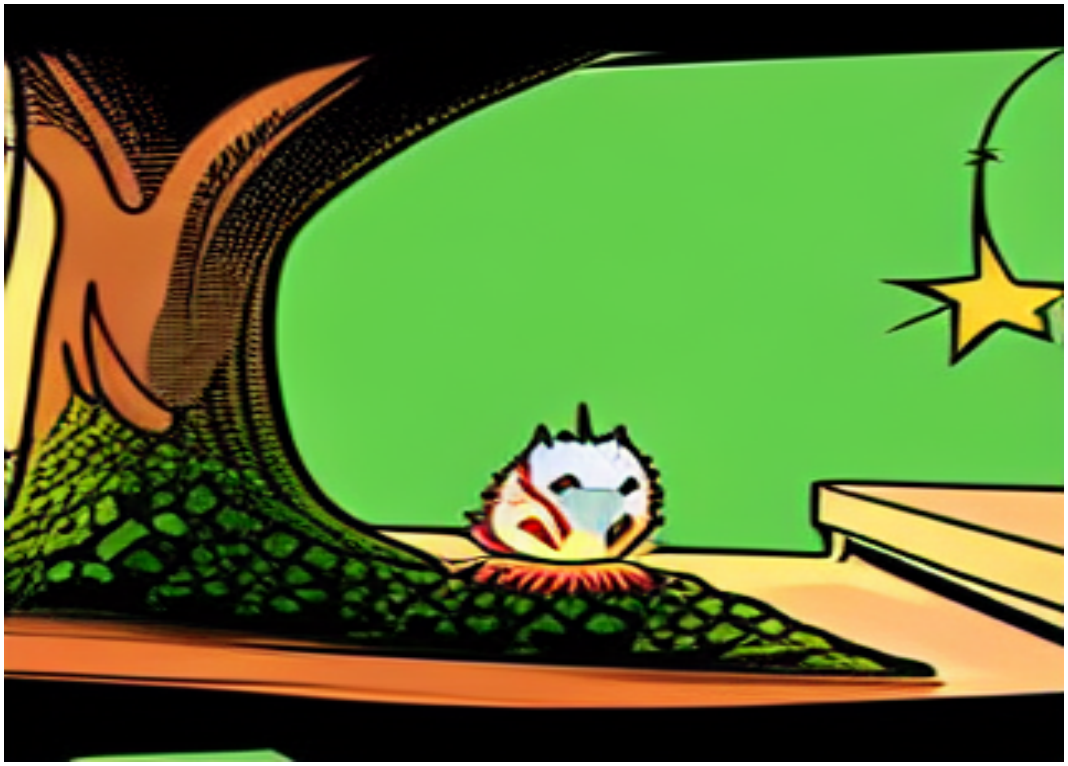

CAPTION (NARRATION):
Turns out, some things don?t need catapults or complex trigonometry. They just need a little room to shine.

THE STAR:
CHIME-GLOWWWWWW!

FOXY:
?Safe travels, little guy! Say hi to the moon for me!?

BARNABY THE OWL:
(dazed, beak dropped open)
?...Gravity is a liar and my degree is entirely useless.?

Panel 4: The Seesaw Catapult

Scene: The owl jumps off a high boulder onto a wooden seesaw log to catapult the star, but the star rolls off harmlessly while the owl bounces head-first into a hollow tree trunk.

TITLE: STAR-STRUCK IN THE BRAMBLEWOOD

PANEL 1: A Fallen Sparkle

SCENE:
Deep twilight in the Bramblewood. Cool blue shadows wrap around ancient, gnarly roots. In a velvety patch of emerald moss, a tiny celestial star?chubby-pointed, golden, and gently pulsating with warm light?sits blinking sleepily. Foxy, a spry little orange fox with oversized ears and a fluffy white-tipped tail, crouches low, curiosity radiating off him. He tentatively pokes the little star with a single paw pad.

CAPTION (NARRATION):
Deep in the Bramblewood, wishes usually stay up where they belong. Usually.

SFX:
boop!
shhhwiiiing... (soft harmonic hum)

FOXY:

?Whoa. Either someone lost a nightlight, or the sky is leaking again.?

THE STAR:
Tinkle-blink!

PANEL 2: Enter the Expert

SCENE:
A chaotic flurry of feathers! A plump, round owl with thick, crooked wire-rimmed spectacles crash-lands through the canopy, catching his talons on a low branch and ending up dangling completely upside down. Without missing a beat, he unrolls an impossibly long, convoluted blueprint covered in scribbled formulas, springs, and gears, thrusting it right into Foxy?s bewildered face.

SFX:
CRASH! FLAP-FLAP-FLAP! THWACK!

BARNABY THE OWL:
?Halt, vulpine citizen! Do not tamper with cosmic debris! Step aside for Barnaby Q. Hootenanny?Doctor of Astro-Mechanical Physics!?

FOXY:
?Uh? nice to meet you, upside-down bird. Should your face be that red??

BARNABY THE OWL:
?Irrelevant! Behold: Operation Sky-Heft 3000! Twelve stages of pure ballistic brilliance! We?ll have this little spark home by tea time!?

PANEL 3: The Slingshot Disaster

SCENE:
Barnaby has rigged a thick, rubbery jungle vine between two sturdy birch trees like a giant slingshot. He?s planted his feet on the ground, leaning all his round weight backward to stretch the vine to its breaking point. The tiny star sits safely on a mushroom cap nearby, totally untouched, while Barnaby?s talons slip on the slick mud.

BARNABY THE OWL:
?Maximum tension achieved! Calculating trajectory... wind resistance... and?WAIT, MY TALONS?!?

SFX:
RRRRRR-STRETCH...
TWAAAAAANG!!

FOXY:
(wincing, covering his ears)
?Barnaby, wait, you didn't even put the star in the?!?

SFX:
FWHUMP-ZOOM!

BARNABY THE OWL:
(streaking backward through the brush)
??HOOOOOOO-BOY-NOT-AGAAAAAIN!?

PANEL 4: The Seesaw Catapult

SCENE:
Barnaby is bruised and covered in twigs, but undeterred. He has placed a thick log across a river stone to make a crude seesaw. The glowing star rests on one end. Barnaby is frozen mid-air, having belly-flopped off a massive boulder toward the opposite end.

Hilariously, just before Barnaby lands, the star simply rolls off the wood onto a soft patch of clover. The empty seesaw flings Barnaby wildly off-course, jamming him head-first into a hollow knot of a rotting oak tree. His tail feathers and round rear twitch comically in the air.

SFX:
PLONK! (star rolling off)
WHAM! (seesaw impact)
THUUUUUUMP! (Barnaby lodging in the trunk)

BARNABY THE OWL:
(muffled from inside the tree trunk)
?A minor miscalculation of kinetic transfer! Fetch my protractor, fox!?

FOXY:
(deadpan, glancing down at the completely unharmed star)
?Right. The protractor was definitely the problem.?

PANEL 5: Float Away Home

SCENE:
A breathtaking wide shot. The tiny star awakens, glowing ten times brighter with brilliant rings of golden and turquoise light. It levitates effortlessly into the cool night air, leaving a shimmering ribbon of stardust behind it as it ascends toward the constellation-strewn sky.

Below, Foxy stands on his hind legs, grinning wide and waving a paw in farewell. Next to him, Barnaby sits covered in moss and dandelion fluff, his crooked glasses slipping down his beak, eyes spiraling in stunned, quiet disbelief.

CAPTION (NARRATION):
Turns out, some things don?t need catapults or complex trigonometry. They just need a little room to shine.

THE STAR:
CHIME-GLOWWWWWW!

FOXY:
?Safe travels, little guy! Say hi to the moon for me!?

BARNABY THE OWL:
(dazed, beak dropped open)
?...Gravity is a liar and my degree is entirely useless.?

Panel 5: Float Away Home

Scene: The glowing star gently floats up on its own powered by its own magic, leaving a glittering trail toward the starry night sky while Foxy waves goodbye and the dazed owl watches in awe.

TITLE: STAR-STRUCK IN THE BRAMBLEWOOD

PANEL 1: A Fallen Sparkle

SCENE:
Deep twilight in the Bramblewood. Cool blue shadows wrap around ancient, gnarly roots. In a velvety patch of emerald moss, a tiny celestial star?chubby-pointed, golden, and gently pulsating with warm light?sits blinking sleepily. Foxy, a spry little orange fox with oversized ears and a fluffy white-tipped tail, crouches low, curiosity radiating off him. He tentatively pokes the little star with a single paw pad.

CAPTION (NARRATION):
Deep in the Bramblewood, wishes usually stay up where they belong. Usually.

SFX:
boop!
shhhwiiiing... (soft harmonic hum)

FOXY:

?Whoa. Either someone lost a nightlight, or the sky is leaking again.?

THE STAR:
Tinkle-blink!

PANEL 2: Enter the Expert

SCENE:
A chaotic flurry of feathers! A plump, round owl with thick, crooked wire-rimmed spectacles crash-lands through the canopy, catching his talons on a low branch and ending up dangling completely upside down. Without missing a beat, he unrolls an impossibly long, convoluted blueprint covered in scribbled formulas, springs, and gears, thrusting it right into Foxy?s bewildered face.

SFX:
CRASH! FLAP-FLAP-FLAP! THWACK!

BARNABY THE OWL:
?Halt, vulpine citizen! Do not tamper with cosmic debris! Step aside for Barnaby Q. Hootenanny?Doctor of Astro-Mechanical Physics!?

FOXY:
?Uh? nice to meet you, upside-down bird. Should your face be that red??

BARNABY THE OWL:
?Irrelevant! Behold: Operation Sky-Heft 3000! Twelve stages of pure ballistic brilliance! We?ll have this little spark home by tea time!?

PANEL 3: The Slingshot Disaster

SCENE:
Barnaby has rigged a thick, rubbery jungle vine between two sturdy birch trees like a giant slingshot. He?s planted his feet on the ground, leaning all his round weight backward to stretch the vine to its breaking point. The tiny star sits safely on a mushroom cap nearby, totally untouched, while Barnaby?s talons slip on the slick mud.

BARNABY THE OWL:
?Maximum tension achieved! Calculating trajectory... wind resistance... and?WAIT, MY TALONS?!?

SFX:
RRRRRR-STRETCH...
TWAAAAAANG!!

FOXY:
(wincing, covering his ears)
?Barnaby, wait, you didn't even put the star in the?!?

SFX:
FWHUMP-ZOOM!

BARNABY THE OWL:
(streaking backward through the brush)
??HOOOOOOO-BOY-NOT-AGAAAAAIN!?

PANEL 4: The Seesaw Catapult

SCENE:
Barnaby is bruised and covered in twigs, but undeterred. He has placed a thick log across a river stone to make a crude seesaw. The glowing star rests on one end. Barnaby is frozen mid-air, having belly-flopped off a massive boulder toward the opposite end.

Hilariously, just before Barnaby lands, the star simply rolls off the wood onto a soft patch of clover. The empty seesaw flings Barnaby wildly off-course, jamming him head-first into a hollow knot of a rotting oak tree. His tail feathers and round rear twitch comically in the air.

SFX:
PLONK! (star rolling off)
WHAM! (seesaw impact)
THUUUUUUMP! (Barnaby lodging in the trunk)

BARNABY THE OWL:
(muffled from inside the tree trunk)
?A minor miscalculation of kinetic transfer! Fetch my protractor, fox!?

FOXY:
(deadpan, glancing down at the completely unharmed star)
?Right. The protractor was definitely the problem.?

PANEL 5: Float Away Home

SCENE:
A breathtaking wide shot. The tiny star awakens, glowing ten times brighter with brilliant rings of golden and turquoise light. It levitates effortlessly into the cool night air, leaving a shimmering ribbon of stardust behind it as it ascends toward the constellation-strewn sky.

Below, Foxy stands on his hind legs, grinning wide and waving a paw in farewell. Next to him, Barnaby sits covered in moss and dandelion fluff, his crooked glasses slipping down his beak, eyes spiraling in stunned, quiet disbelief.

CAPTION (NARRATION):
Turns out, some things don?t need catapults or complex trigonometry. They just need a little room to shine.

THE STAR:
CHIME-GLOWWWWWW!

FOXY:
?Safe travels, little guy! Say hi to the moon for me!?

BARNABY THE OWL:
(dazed, beak dropped open)
?...Gravity is a liar and my degree is entirely useless.?